I have Ubuntu 11.04 with gnome-shell. Sometimes it loads NetworkManager after login and sometimes not. Sometimes it loads after a restart, sometimes not. To get it to load I have to do the following: Delete /var/lib/NetworkManager/NetworkManager.state run nmcli dev list unplug the computer. plug the computer run nmcli dev list My current workaround is to run the above commands after a restart, which works, but the issue is that I lose the network connection during that time, as NetworkManager stops handling my network connection. How can I get the NetworkManager to load after the login, regardless of how it starts? A: If you are using /etc/network/interfaces you can add the following line: iface eth0 inet manual And if you do not have any network interfaces defined (and want it to connect only to the network upon login) you can use the -m option on nmcli: nmcli con up id [connection-name] -m For more information you can refer to NetworkManager man page. Q: NSSortDescriptor is not sorting strings by accented characters I'm trying to sort a NSMutableArray, that contains strings, which are going to be inserted into a MySQL database. I want to sort my NSMutableArray alphabetically, but I'm not having any success. NSString *searchString = [textField.text stringByTrimmingCharactersInSet:[NSCharacterSet whitespaceAndNewlineCharacterSet]]; NSMutableArray *searchResults = [[NSMutableArray 0cc13bf012
