END End of Translation. Sudden unexpected death in epilepsy (SUDEP) is the third leading cause of death in patients with epilepsy. The pathophysiology of SUDEP is unknown. Because of the broad range of clinical manifestations of SUDEP, the term “non-traumatic” has been preferred over “sudden” to exclude other etiologies. A growing body of clinical and experimental evidence suggests the role of epilepsy in SUDEP, particularly during sleep. This increased awareness of SUDEP and increased rates of SUDEP have prompted the American Epilepsy Society (AES) to organize and sponsor an International Symposium on SUDEP (ISSUEP) in 2008, the first to be organized by a major professional society. The symposium will take place in San Antonio, TX, on October 3-5, 2008. The workshop participants and attendees include basic and clinical scientists, physicians, and trainees, epilepsy nurses, and representatives of consumer organizations from 11 countries. The ISSUEP will be composed of eight sessions; half of the speakers will be female. This is the first time an international conference has been devoted to the topic of SUDEP. Our goal is to have an equal number of basic and clinical scientists to allow cross-fertilization and stimulate new ideas and discussion. The audience will be composed of the community of scientists and clinicians who work in the area of SUDEP. The goal of this workshop is to generate and disseminate novel information and ideas that may lead to improved recognition, prevention, treatment, and protection against SUDEP. We plan to use the conference to disseminate a draft consensus statement that summarizes the current knowledge on SUDEP, the major risk factors, risk assessment, prevention, and treatment. The aim is to reach a global consensus on the diagnosis and management of patients who are at risk for SUDEP. This consensus statement will be developed based on the presentations and discussions at the conference. The consensus document will be submitted to the journals for publication, and the final manuscript will be presented at the AES 2008 meeting. Accurate incidence figures are lacking in many countries because of the lack of legislation mandating death certificates and the lack of a surveillance system. Although SUDEP has been recognized by some developed countries for over a decade, SUDEP incidence is underreported because of underdiagnosis and underreporting of epilepsy deaths. In some places (i

3D Extracellular Matrix-based Graphene Nanoparticles for Renal Drug-Eluting Nodule Implantation. Chronic kidney disease (CKD) is a major health problem affecting millions of people. Despite recent advancements, local drug delivery approaches to attenuate the progression of CKD, such as nephrectomy, remain a clinical challenge. In this study, three-dimensional (3D) extracellular matrix (ECM)-based graphene nanoparticles (NPs) were developed as delivery systems for the implantation of a drug-eluting nodule. A 3D collagen ECM scaffold (3D Collagen ECM) was fabricated and coated with graphene oxide (GO) via a single-step aqueous reduction approach. The fabricated 3D Collagen ECM-GO NPs were subsequently engineered as a drug eluting nodule implant for CKD. Nodule implantation was conducted in a mouse model of mild CKD by implanting 3D Collagen ECM-GO NPs with an anti-fibrotic compound, dexamethasone (Dex) into the renal capsule. The feasibility of the 3D Collagen ECM-GO NPs as a platform for drug eluting nodule implantation was evaluated by quantifying the NPs within the host renal
