s, Swimming pools, Barns, Commercial Buildings, Chinnaswamy Stadium. These three models usually differ only in the heights, the number of stories and the Roofing. We intend to present for the purpose of this course the roof of the Railstation, the houses and the commercial building. Each model does not scale linearly and the value of the height and the width are very different. Thus the difficulty for the student is to develop the power of coordinate geometry. Programme: Course is to study the Railstation, the houses and the commercial building. Activity: Water Resistance Study - Model 1A1 We now move on to the second model: the swimming pool. The water is resistant and the weight must be considered in its design. Prokola, the Greek, ancient architect, is mainly known for his wooden structures. He was one of the first architects who used composite materials. Photograph courtesy of S. Gazdahidis 1 Programme The activity on-line below was written by the architect S. Gazdahidis, who sent it to the Architecture Course. It contains a lot of information and can be useful for future courses. The swimming pool is usually built to be used in summer or during hot weather. Directions The model was cut in the middle of eight different planes to produce a number of pieces. We need to combine these pieces in order to get the model: 1. A long face included in the sides; 2. A bottom face included in the sides; 3. A bottom face that would fit inside the bottom face of the long face; 4. A surface below the bottom face of the long face. 5. Lower part of the slope of a roof. 6. Upper part of the slope of a roof, not included in the model because it is empty and thus does not require anything; 7. Upper part of the slope of a roof, not included in the model because it is included into the shoulder of the house. 8. Roof face that sticks to the top of the building.
