I'm trying to implement a game in java where the player's movements can be any combination of a,b,c,d keys. Each key will move them up, down, left, and right, and the movement is handled by moving the player's vector. I want to be able to calculate the distance from the origin to the point the player is standing at, and move accordingly, but the only distance formula I've seen that would work for this situation is:  $distance = \cos(\text{angle}) * \text{radius}$  which is, as I understand, not the best way to do it. A: I would just use the Pythagorean Theorem. You can just use the following to get the distance of any point on a line from the origin and the angle between that point and the origin:  $distance = \text{Math.sqrt}(x * x + y * y)$  Q: Criar botão de atualização automática porém não sei se roda o ajax Pessoal estou criando um código para quando uma nova imagem for cadastrada a tabela será atualizada automaticamente com a nova imagem.
