La-La Land Records, the home of Vittorio Storaro, has long been regarded as the most reliable brand of French film optics. It's been said that the company has spent over a decade establishing a reputation as the ultimate designer of independent lenses, special effects blades, and optical assistants. If you're looking for a great deal on the company's most expensive product, you will certainly find these La-La Land records at a steal. While they are not often available as a mail-order source, it is possible to buy a set of these remarkable lenses through our friends at FotoKem or CPG Imports. So, how about a set for your collection and a chance to enjoy their beauty (which is second to none), at a fraction of the price? La-La Land records are large rectangular glass prisms, designed specifically for stereo filming to help achieve a more cinematic look. A pair of these prisms is mounted on a curved arm and the arm pivots in the same plane as the camera moves, thus maintaining a constant parallax view and making it easy to line up shots or pans. Typically, a La-La Land record costs between $10,000 and $15,000. In this range, you can find plenty of La-La Land records, but we've listed some of the most interesting variations. The xantho-striate (XSA) vascular anomaly, characterized by a cortical vessel anomaly with focal hyperintensities on T1-weighted MRI images and associated arterial insufficiency, is a relatively common anomaly. Historically, this vascular anomaly has been viewed as a vascular malformation, but recent studies suggest that it represents a previously unrecognized variant of the cerebral microvasculature. Vascular shunting, with resultant arterial ischemia, may be an important factor in the pathogenesis of this vascular anomaly. When evaluated by modern neuroimaging and intracranial arteriography, the XSA may represent an extremely common source of arterial insufficiency in patients with subarachnoid hemorrhage.Browning.JPG President Barack Obama smiles as he greets Vice President Joe Biden and his family at the White House Monday, Aug. 19, 2013. Obama and Biden were in town for a series of events on the activities of the One Community initiative. (AP Photo/Susan Walsh) (POLL) A new Gallup poll finds that more than half of the nation's residents say the country is on the wrong track -- the highest level of pessimism since the recession of 2008. Also on the right track were the states of New Jersey, Colorado and Massachusetts. The states on the wrong track were Mississippi, Oklahoma, Arizona, Pennsylvania and Alabama. The nationwide poll of 1,006 adults conducted Aug. 6-10 and released Monday found that 49 percent of the public say the nation is on the wrong track, with 32 percent on the right track and 17 percent unsure. The margin of error is plus or minus four percentage points. In January 2009, just after Obama's inauguration, the national gloom level stood at 44 percent. That was the lowest point of optimism since the economy crashed in 2008. As the gloom rises
