In the repair of large bone defects, autologous bone transplantation is still the main method. However, application of xenografts is limited due to the shortage of donor bone. In addition, autologous bone transplantation may be limited by resorption after operation. To date, no ideal bone graft is available. Tissue engineering is an interdisciplinary research field that combines tissue engineering technology with other disciplines to develop bioengineered grafts which can stimulate the endogenous formation of bone and effectively repair bone defects. Studies have shown that three-dimensional bone tissue engineering scaffolds can effectively promote the proliferation and differentiation of bone cells and construct the bone defect repair microenvironment in vivo. So far, the study on tissue engineering of bone repair has made great progress. This article reviews the technology and progress of three-dimensional tissue engineering scaffolds in bone repair.ASKO - June 2018 Aksjo's ASKO is June's monthly board publication. This month's feature is from Bob May and the article includes some wonderful images of the 1940's Aksjo hockey rink. Courtesy of the May family "A Winter Playroom" By Bob May The summer recess brought home a new little Aksjo couple to the neighbourhood. Their son was born in the spring of 1951, and they named him Bob. Everyone but Bob made the trip up to the store. It had been raining for a couple days, and the store owner said the floor was melting,
