Neuronal networks are continually exposed to multiple insults that can compromise function, including, for example, chemical toxins, ischemia, traumatic injury or neurodegenerative diseases. When a neuronal network is severely damaged, the ability to support axonal regrowth is lost, and the network must rebuild itself. However, little is known about the molecular machinery that promotes regrowth after the network is severely damaged. Alpha-synuclein (alpha-syn) is a protein that is expressed by neurons and is thought to be involved in cell-to-cell signaling in neuronal networks. Alpha-syn is found in the presynaptic nerve terminals of neurons and can be released into the synapse. The hydrophobic C-terminus of alpha-syn is thought to play a role in organizing the protein into soluble oligomers and protofibrils. These oligomers and protofibrils may be toxic to the neuron. One of the symptoms of Parkinson's disease (PD) is the accumulation of these protein aggregates in the brain. The present disclosure addresses the foregoing needs and provides a solution to them. Q: What are the main differences between the zmap API and the REST API? I'm looking to authenticate users of our app using OAuth, but was unable to find a ready-made function that would authenticate them using zmap or any other means. I also found that zmap offers 2 different APIs: REST and zmap-v2. What are the main differences between the 2 APIs? Why should I choose zmap-v2 instead of the REST API? A: The two APIs are nearly identical. The only major differences 6d1f23a050
